

Briana Gilmore works as the Head of Global Accessibility Policy at Uber where she guides the company's vision and strategy to be the world's most accessible mobility and delivery platform. She's spent the past 15 years working at the intersections of healthcare policy, user-led design, and geography and planning that supports community integration. She holds a Research Master's Degree from the University of Amsterdam.